To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR,

It has been my Practice for many Years, to set aside some Hours for Meditation. The Subject of my last Reflections was that inveterate Enemy of Merit, Envy. On these Occasions I generally call in Antiquity to illustrate my Thoughts, and carefully review those Passages, which were written for our Instruction. However, as I observed that Vice so predominant in the present Age, I could not, for this Time, withdraw my Consideration from the living Scene. There I discover'd a Cabal of Men attacking One Great Man with an uncommon Fury: Every Action of his was misrepresented; nay, Every Intention misconstrued. The Publick Papers were full of Alarms, Invasions, Ships, Towns, and Provinces, taken. Blocks, Gallows, and Gibbets, were ready to punish his Misconduct. For my Part, I have the Happiness to judge coolly of Things. As I am addicted to no Party, I am free from Prejudice. So when I observe a Cause overdone, I am apt to suspect the Equity of it. When Superiors are satisfied with the Proceedings of a Minister, and Inferiors appear to be offended at his Conduct, 'tis reasonable to surmise, that the Man's Power is more distasteful than his Actions. Here I began to reflect, How willing is Envy? but, by good Luck, at the same Time, how unable? Providence is just; by the wise Disposal of which Curst Cows, as they say, have Short Horns. I was sorry to see these Animosities among the Children of the same Mother, the Subjects of the same Country. The Scene was shocking; and yet it afforded me some Comfort. Envy follows Merit, as a Shade attends a Body: And the larger the Body the greater the Shade. Here I made an agreeable Pause: For, if the Envy be great, I thought the Merit must also be great in Proportion, according to the Doctrine of Contraries, Contrarium solum est ratio. Therefore my Hopes were just, that the Merit would be able to defy the Attacks of the Envy, and render its Designs abortive. And, indeed, how weak are the Inventions of Envy? Some Great Men have deservedly fallen a Victim to their Injur'd Country; therefore this Great Man must also become a Sacrifice to his Enemies; because they alone will have it, that he has injur'd his Country. Some weak and indolent Princes have given up their Ministers to the Resentment of their Rivals; therefore a prudent and vigilant Prince will do the same. Subtil Logic! Comparisons must be very exact, to bear their due Weight. Princes have too many Examples of their unfortunate Predecessors, to abandon their Friends, and thereby lay themselves open to Disaffected Subjects. Those that hate a Minister for his Conduct, cannot love the Prince, the Minister's Master, by whose Pleasure the Minister's Conduct is directed. I can draw as good a Consequence as these sharp Logicians. Persons disaffected to a just Government, sooner or later, meet with an Unhappy Fate: Therefore, &c. I can quote as many Precedents as 'Squire Cate' can; and am, perhaps, as good a Prophet as he is. The Injunction of Simo, in Tenence, to his Intriguing Slave, Do's, may be very seasonable in these Times; Cave Notwithstanding which Caution the Cunning one dabbled on, till he fell into Lobb's-Pound. Cave.

His Brother, who lay in the next Room, heard nothing of the Matter, so 'tis imagin'd that he dropp'd down in an Apoplectick Fit.

The First, Anne Stuart, was committed to Bridewell, refusing to pay the Penalty; the other Three paid it to the Informers, and to the Overseers of the several Parishes where the Offences were committed. The same Day Thomas Smith and Richard Franklin were, by the said Colonel, committed to Newgate, for Cheating and Defrauding one Richard Gieves, of Nineteen Guineas, and upwards. They are Two notorious Money-Droppers and Gamblers, who pretending to have found a Shilling, where they met this poor Fellow, enticed him to go to a Publick House, where several of their Accomplices wait for Prey; and there, at Cutting of the Cards, they stripp'd him of what he had acquired by hard Labour in Service for some Years. When they were taken, at a very notorious House in Chandos-street, they were so conscious of their Guilt, that One of them was got in Bed, with his Clothes on, to the Woman of the House, tho' brought to Bed but Two Days before, and the other was wrapp'd up in the Curtains of her Bed, to avoid the Search of the Constables that were in the House, where there are several Trap Doors, to contrive the Escape of those Fellows (who abound there) when Justice is at their Heels.

Advertisement concerning this Book.

This Masterpiece of religious Policy was published, many Years since, in Latin, French, and Dutch: Mr. John Schipper, a Bookseller at Amsterdam, bought one of them at Antwerp, among other books, and afterwards reprinted it. The Jesuits, being informed that he had purchased this Book, demanded it back from him; but he had then sent it to Holland. One of the Society, who lived at Amsterdam, hearing it said, soon after, to a Catholic Bookfeller, by Name Van Eyke, that Schipper was printing a Book which concerned the Jesuits; replied, that if it was on y The Rules of the Society, he should not be under any Concern; but desired he would inform himself what it was. Being told by the Bookfeller, that it was The Secret Instructions of the Society, the good Father, shrugging up his Shoulders, and knitting his Brow, said, that he saw no other Remedy but denying that this Piece came from the Society. The Reverend Fathers however thought it more advisable to purchase the whole Edition, which they soon after did, some few Copies excepted; from one of these it was afterwards reprinted, with this Account prefixed; which is here said to be taken from two Roman Catholics, Men of Credit.
